

TWO ARMED MEN HOLD UP STATE LIQUOR STORE HERE; FORCE MANAGER TO OPEN SAFE AND HAND OVER RECEIPTS

Mulford L. Callanan Forced Back Into Store at Point of Gun

AT 9.40 LAST NIGHT

Bandits Then Order Manager
Into Basement and Calmly
Walk Out of Store

Two gunmen ordered Mulford L. Callanan, manager of the Pennsylvania State Liquor Store, 306 Mill street, back into the store last night and compelled him at the point of a gun to open the safe. They took the day's receipts, put Callanan in the basement and then left, locking the door and taking the keys with them. The amount of money taken was not made public by Callanan but it is estimated that it must have totaled nearly $1,000.

The hold-up was timely staged and the gunmen were perfectly unconcerned. They undoubtedly had "spotted" the place for some time and timed the robbery so that it went off uninterrupted.

Callanan was alone in the store as the other two clerks had just left a short time previously. The money was counted before they left and placed in the safe. Callanan put out the lights and walked to the front door to leave for the day. Two men stood looking into the window at the bottles displayed. This was nothing unusual as stated by Callanan, "there is nearly always someone looking into the windows and we think nothing of it."

World-Girdling Trip At Low Cost Is Recounted

The annual reception to the Junior Travel Club was tendered by members of The Travel Club last evening.

A hearty welcome was extended to the young women guests by the vice-president of the senior club, Mrs. Roy Tracy, after which Mrs. Theodore B. Megargee introduced the speaker of the evening, John F. Hollister, George School.

"Around the World on a Dollar a Day," was the travelogue presented by Mr. Hollister which greatly interested and highly entertained the gathering of club women.

The speaker told that to make such a trip at such low cost it is necessary to have the journey cover a lengthy period of time, about two years or more. The trip he recounted was taken by him and his brother.

By boat to Helsinki, Finland, sailed the two, the Olympic stadium in that city being visited. The sights and experiences which the usual tourist does not enjoy were mentioned, owing to the fact that the two young men went into the by-ways as well as the high-ways. In Finland bicycles were purchased for a trek to Czechoslovakia, where they lived for two weeks with the peasants, attending the fairs and festivals. Selling the bicycles in Munich the two hitch-hiked to parts of Germany. Given a "lift" by German officers they were taken to Neuromberg to witness the military show, and remained as guests of the German government for two weeks, sleeping with the soldiers in the barracks, "and there we were fed propaganda," added the speaker.

Switzerland; Italy, where they slept in the crater of Mt. Vesuvius; Egypt, described as the most fascinating country "where you can still use the Bible as a guide," were all visited.

The struggle between the Arabs and the Jews in the Damascus section was vividly presented, with the two young men having a narrow escape from death after insisting to young lads that they had no cigarettes to give them.

Mr. Hollister told of the mob gathering as the cry arose "Kill them; they are Jews," and of the quick retreat that was made to the bus as the stoning started. The following day two Americans were killed near the spot he added.

After visiting India, China and other countries, a stop was made at the Hawaiian Islands, and then home via California.

Mr. Hollister displayed a number of curios secured on his trip, he explaining they were practical curios and not souvenirs.

Refreshments concluded the pleasure of the evening.

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 29.—Prominent educators are scheduled to attend the annual meeting and Harvest Festival of National Farm School near here tomorrow afternoon. The public is invited to attend the exercises to be held in Louchheim Auditorium.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Jacob G. Lipman, Dean and Director of Agriculture at Rutgers University. Other guests will include Willard C. Thompson, Howard Sprague, Arthur J. Farley, John W. Bartless and Harry O. Thompson, all of Rutgers University, and Dr. William H. Pineshrider, of Philadelphia.

Hagedorn, a Philadelphian who has been serving as president for Herbert D. Allman, active for many years at the school as president, but who has been ill.

Whether a new resident president for Farm School will be announced at the annual meeting could not be ascertained today. When the student body went on a protest strike over a year ago demanding that Dean Cletus L. Goodling resign, the board promised a new resident president but made no change in the Dean for what they declared would be "the time being." Dean Goodling is still at the school.

Robbed of $9.30

REFUSED AN AUTO RIDE

A man snatched a purse containing $9.30 from the hands of a woman, as she walked out Beaver Dam Road, beyond the borough limits, shortly before five o'clock, yesterday afternoon.

The woman reporting the robbery to the police was Mrs. Mary Slovoso, 37, who resides on Beaver Dam Road, in Bristol Township.

Mrs. Slovoso told the police that she had visited a store at Jefferson avenue and Spring street and made some purchases. Carrying a parcel she started to walk to her home. A man invited her to ride in his auto, but she refused and the car drove on, she says. She continued to walk north on Beaver street until at a point beyond the borough limits. It was here that she was accosted by a man who quickly grabbed her purse and jumping into the automobile drove off. Mrs. Slovoso was unable to describe the man or give the license number of the car.

Mrs. Slovoso on August 26th, 1935, was allegedly cut in the throat by her husband, who is now confined in Fairview, a State hospital for the criminally insane, as the result of slashing his wife. She was then a resident of Philadelphia, and visiting on New Buckley street when the affair took place.

Judge Arthur James Predicts G. O. P. Sweep

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—(INS)—In a two-day campaign throughout this Pennsylvania metropolis, Judge Arthur H. James, Republican candidate for Governor, today offered the prediction that he would be elected "by one of the largest majorities ever rolled up for any candidate in the history of Pennsylvania elections."

At half a dozen rallies in the city, James declared his Democratic rival, Charles Alvin Jones, "equally guilty" with the Earle Administration in "mal-administration of State affairs and poison-gas political propaganda" because of condoning the acts of the party in power.

Charging that the Earle Administration was driving industry from the State, James added:

"Maybe industries have been wayward children. Maybe they have been perfect. But that is no reason to kill them, no reason to drive them out of the State."

"New Jersey is calling them. Delaware is calling them. So is Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee and other States. They are saying: 'Bring your machinery. Bring your equipment. Bring your engineers but don't bring your labor.'"

"Jobs on WPA vs. jobs in private industry" is the essential issue of the campaign, U. S. Senator James J. Davis, GOP candidate for re-election and James' running mate, declared.

Asserting that the Communist party had adopted the slogan, "Defeat the Republican Party at all costs," he added:

"Pennsylvania is now being operated for the benefit of Moscow, London and Washington, by way of Harrisburg, controlled by men who have pledged their first allegiance, not to Pennsylvania, but to the high waving banners of internationalism."

GRAFT IN WPA

The significance of the indictment of 73 New Mexican public officials, charged with political, and other, tampering with WPA administration in that state, lies in where the initiative came from.

The grand jury inquiry that resulted in the indictments was instituted last Sept. 7 by a Federal judge, who then said:

"It is common rumor that grafting has been going on for some time, but so far as I know there has been no investigation whatever."

The "common rumor," however rife in New Mexico, had not at that time reached the ears of Harry Hopkins in Washington. Or if it had done so, it had not been deemed sufficiently out of the ordinary to warrant an inquiry.

It was not until two weeks after the grand jury began sitting that Mr. Hopkins finally moved to dismiss the state administrator, Fred Healy. Healy is among those now indicted, along with an assistant Federal district attorney as well as four relatives and the private secretary of a United States senator.

The most charitable conclusion to be drawn from these facts is that WPA headquarters in Washington is not very alert to check up on reported abuses of the vast funds handled. One is reminded that rumors of misuse of the funds are chronically rife, not just in New Mexico but in every one of 48 states.

NEW IDEA SHOOT

A sandwich is a sandwich, as it has been through the many decades since this "dish" was devised to suit the needs of quick lunchers. We are so used to the call for ham on rye and Swiss on white and wiener on week that we may find it hard to adjust ourselves to the modern reform, or streamlining, of that time-honored institution, the sandwich.

Lately we have detected a faint suggestion of peanuts in those cute little pig sausages, a hint that the porkers were peanut-fed, but the same effect may be achieved by the rubbing of a dab of peanut butter into the run-of-the-mine sausage meat. This is not the chief development of the new trend. The most revolutionary development is the perfection of a machine which shoots sauerkraut flavor into your sliced roast pork sandwich, a whiff of mushroom pudding into the cube steak sandwich. A Neapolitan ice cream idea is borrowed for a new creation which weds slices of ham and veal with slivers of cheese; there are nougats of steak and bacon, spinach and lamb, beef and corn. The combinations are numberless.

The device which does all these things to make over the habits of lunchroom habitués was demonstrated at the national restaurant and exhibition in Chicago.

Martin J. Fallon is Victim of Accident in New Brunswick

faithfully representing his constituents, Mr. Fallon was held in high esteem by not only the residents of his own ward, the members of borough council with whom he served so long, but the citizenry throughout the entire borough.

Mr. Fallon was a native of Bristol, being born on Race street, 64 years ago. He was the son of the late Patrick and Catherine Fallon. He attended the Bristol public schools for a short time, beginning work at the early age of nine. He was employed in the hosiery mills which operated on Buckle street, later he was employed at the wallpaper mill which operated here on Canal street, in the building now occupied by the D. Landreth Seed Co. Twenty years ago he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's Police Department and was on duty when injured. He had resided in the fourth ward during his entire lifetime.

Thursday night, shortly after nine o'clock, Mr. Fallon left Bristol via train for New Brunswick. He had been waiting an assignment at Bristol, but was finally ordered to New Brunswick. It is said that after arriving at his headquarters he decided to walk across the street for a cup of coffee, and it was while doing so that the accident occurred.

Mr. Fallon was a communicant of St. Mark's Church. He was affiliated with Bucks Lodge, No. 1169, Loyal Order of Moose, Brotherhood of Trainmen, and was a past-president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Two Armed Men Hold Up State Liquor Store Here

The two men pressed against Callanan and pushing a gun against his body told him to "get back in there." Callanan backed into the darkened store and the men closed the door. They continued to press against Callanan and backed him into the back room behind the shelving partition.

"Open the safe" was the next order given. Callanan attempted to bluff them at this point but they became persistent and got "rough" in their talk.

After the safe was opened the men stuffed the paper money into their pockets and took the bags of coins. Callanan was told to get down into the basement and was hit in the face by one of the bandits. The hold-up pair then left, taking the keys from the front door with them.

Bristol police, Penna. Motor Police and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo were notified and began an investigation.

Man No. 1 is described as being about 25 years of age, 5 feet and 10 inches in height, weighing about 150 pounds. He had a smoothly shaven face and wore dark hat and was dark complexioned.

Man No. 2, the smaller one of the group, was the one holding the gun over Callanan as he was forced to obey their commands. He is described as being about 22 years of age, 5 feet and six inches in height, weighing about 135 pounds. He also was dark complexioned and wore a plaid lumber jacket and dark trousers.

Both of the men spoke with a foreign accent.

The Bristol State Liquor store was broken into and robbed last April when goods valued at several hundreds of dollars were taken.

Liquor stores throughout the State are the objects of many hold-ups and robberies, presumably because of the cash they have on hand as well as the marketability of their stock.

"Often a Bridesmaid"

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XV

It was the 6 o'clock boat. Margaret sat up front, on the upper deck, enjoying the first evening coolness and the chance to read the paper in quiet. It wasn't until they were standing, and the boat was moving into the pier, that she noticed the sunbrowned young man just ahead of her. She stared, and he turned.

"Margaret!"

"Kenny... But how—when—"

"Just now. Just off the boat. Which way are you going home?"

She nodded, and he took her arm as they went down the runway and toward the waiting trains. "I'm going home, too. Surprise the folks. They don't know I'm coming."

She was breathing more naturally now, and he was beginning to show his embarrassment. It occurred to both of them that things were decidedly awkward.

"Well—" he said. She knew that he was going to say something about looking for a fellow in the smoker, and leave her.

"Come and sit with me and tell me about it!"

She hurried ahead and he followed with his heavy suitcase. When they were seated in the train she said, "Kenny—this is funny! We're supposed to be mad at each other—and I forgot and spoke to you! But anyway, I couldn't very well stay mad at anyone who's marrying my best friend, so we may as well bury the hatchet, and—"

"Kiss and make up and everything," he agreed, grinning nervously. But he felt better. He wiped his forehead. "So Sue told you."

"Naturally. She was SO upset. She'll be alive again, now that you are back. She knows, of course."

He giggled uneasily. "No—no. Not yet. The fact is, well, with one thing and another, I was more or less let out."

"Oh, Kenny, your wonderful job! All because Decker—"

"Well, to be frank, it wasn't only that. It brought it to a head, you might say. You were really right about it, Margaret. It wasn't the place for me. I should have started here. There it's so very provincial—a man who is a big shot here is just another dance partner there. I wish I'd never gone. But, of course, it was good experience. I'm going in with a different outlook here."

"Sue will be glad anyway."

"Maybe. It puts me on a spot, though. She's so intense, and she wants to get married right away and go. Maggie, how can I? I haven't even a job, unless I go to work with my father, and that's the last thing I want to do—go in the grocery business."

"Oh, Sue will win her dad over, and get him to settle something on her."

"Maybe. But it doesn't look much like it now."

Margaret looked at him. Good heavens, he meant it. He WANTED the Deckers to settle something on Sue.

Feeling sick again, she leaned back tired in her seat, and watched the marshy tidelands speed by. She thought, he CAN'T mean it! And she knew he did. She edged a little away from him. A man who takes money from a girl—? This is going to cure me, she thought, with an odd sort of satisfaction. Now, if she could just prove that he really didn't care a rap for Sue, and was just marrying her for her money.

He was saying something about Honolulu, but she interrupted. She said, "Sue looks terrible."

"No!"

"Skin and bones. Her eyes all sunken. Really, the Deckers ought to do something about it. Make her go somewhere for a rest, or something. She's a sick girl."

He half rose in his seat, as if he were going to get off the train and run ahead of it. As if it could not get him to her quick enough.

Margaret looked out the window again. She couldn't bear it.

It was a relief to everyone when Sue finally won over the family, and she and Ken were formally engaged.

Most of the previous love trysts were held in the Wickham house, or the Wickham lawn, with Margaret determinedly loyal to Sue, and the other Wickhams, determinedly loyal to Margaret, in a constant state of upheaval over it.

How they got through the winter, what with Sue's tears and ecstasies, and their own bickerings, was a marvel to all. What went on at the Deckers could only be surmised. But in January father Decker, who had publicly announced that he'd take a shot at young Raleigh if he found him prowling around the place, and mother Decker, who had tearfully told her friends she'd rather see her baby dead in her coffin than married to a nobody like that, gave up the struggle, and ordered the wedding invitations.

"When Pops found that Ken and I didn't want a thing from him, and that we were really going to live on Ken's salary he couldn't help it," Sue told Margaret exultingly.

"One can scarcely blame him," Margaret answered dryly, for she was thinking of Ken's little slip about hoping for an allowance, and it was impossible to think of Sue, who had always had everything, doing with less.

"Ken is so high minded," Sue rattled on, "he couldn't bear to think of me going without things and he wanted me to wait and go East first with Mamma—she's going to New York and, unless Pops is mean about it, to Europe for six months, because she was so disappointed we didn't get to Japan."

"Oh—you're going then?"

"Mamma is, I'm not. I'm marrying Ken in April. I was going to marry him whether Pops gave his consent or not, but when he saw I really meant it and Ken wouldn't take a nickel from him, why he pulled in his horns. And when he found out that we're going to live on $100 a month—"

Margaret thought of the eighteen a week that she and Ken had once planned to live on. But that was two years ago, things had changed since then. She said, "That isn't very much, Sue. Besides, I shouldn't think that if his father took him into the business he could afford to pay him more than that."

"Yes, wouldn't you? But you can't do anything with him, he's an ignorant old thing you know. And it will be fun. Anyway, when Pops saw that it was all true love and he couldn't stop it why he said he'd see we had a decent wedding."

anyway, and he'd give us a house, and I said all right, we'd take that much. Just a little house because I'm going to do all my own work—"

"But you don't know HOW! How can you possibly—"

"Oh, it's easy. I can learn. And what I really came over to tell you is that I want you for bridesmaid. Just you. Nobody else. It's going to be awfully nice, and terribly simple. Me in chalk white, princess style, with yards of veil and Madonna lilies, and you in green."

"But Sue, you know I work, and I don't see how I—"

"Now listen, Maggie, you'll have an enormous blond straw hat, with streamers and daisies... I want it in the garden, just terribly. But suppose it rains?"

"It won't rain." How could it rain, when Sue wanted sunshine? Didn't she get everything? EVERYTHING?

Sue might intend to lead the simple life on $100 a month, but that didn't prevent her from spending several thousand of her father's money on a trousseau.

Exultantly, she dragged out much of the loot to show to Ken ahead of time. "Looky—a camel's hair coat—so I can have something to put on five years from now—because, honey, we'll NEVER be able to buy any clothes. And this pair of silver foxes. I'll look dressy in them over my kitchen aprons. Aren't I the clever flier?"

Margaret, helping with the wedding invitations, scowled over Mrs. Decker's address book. Undoubtedly Sue was being smart to get so many things that would last indefinitely, but why brag about it to Ken? Why keep reminding him he couldn't buy her anything?

They were always forgetting her, and discussing their most intimate plans when she couldn't help but hear. It was embarrassing and it made her want to shake Sue.

They were at it again. Sue was saying, "I'll scrub and sew and wash and cook for you, sweetheart, and we'll live on hamburger and beans, but you must cut out drinking and smoking, and so will I, and—"

"I'm not going to give up smoking, and I don't spend enough on drinking to make any difference. Besides, you don't want to give up smoking yourself!"

"Why?"

"Because we're going to be poor!"

"A hundred a month isn't much. I'll admit but people do live on it pretty decently, especially when they don't have to pay rent, and we won't if your father buys a house for us. My mother sets a fine table on very little money—"

"If you're comparing ME to your mother—" Sue began angrily.

"Well, if you two are going to fight, I'm going home. It's late anyway," Margaret said, slipping an elastic band around her addressed envelopes, and preparing to leave.

"I'll walk home with you," Ken said. But she had to wait, uncomfortably, while they billed and cooed and said goodnight. And it hurt, that Sue, the jealous, didn't mind Ken walking home with her in the dark on an April night.

"She won't, dear. Don't excite yourself. I hope you didn't have

CHAPTER XVI

So many things hurt Margaret these last days before Sue's wedding. The innocent surprise of old friends who hadn't heard of the change in brides. The Deckers' ill concealed superiority. Her own family's stiff-necked pride. Her place as bridesmaid.

But when the day came, sunny and warm as Sue had confidently expected, when she was dressed in the flattering green dress, with its picturesque hat, and Sue's old beau, Joe Atwell, whom Ken had chosen for best man, showed that he considered her several degrees more interesting than the bride, self confidence came back.

She was a beautiful bridesmaid. It was a beautiful wedding. The bride, tall, ethereally slender, her face whitely, beautifully alight, was a bride to stir anyone's heart.

The bishop said the solemn, lovely words. Sue's mother, stoutly stylish in flowered chiffon, her fat feet wedged into ribboned sandals, cried so hard her mascara ran.

Even Aunt Bet was touched. "Isn't it beautiful?" people whispered over the breakfast creamed chicken and mushrooms. "She's giving up everything for him!"

"He's a great football hero you know—or he was—but his people are—" and they'd steal shy looks at gray, stringy-necked Mrs. Raleigh in her home-made blue crepe, and self-conscious little Mr. Raleigh, trying to be jovial, and doing it too loudly.

"They're going to live on his hundred

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL

Most of the recent movie spectacles have dealt with past history—either of a famous personality or of an international catastrophe.

For instance, "In Old Chicago," based on the great Chicago fire, and "San Francisco," dealing with the terrible earthquake and fire, are taken from early American history. Other lavish pictures like "Adventures of Robin Hood" and "Romeo and Juliet" eulogize heroes and fictitious characters across the sea.

But now there comes to the screen a thundering, poignant drama of adventure in our own country of today—story of staunch loyalties, unmerciful progressiveness, and emotional entanglements involved in the plans to mechanize a cavalry regiment. The story is "Army Girl," a Republic Picture starring Madge Evans and Preston Foster, which is at the Bristol Theatre today.

"You Sinners" which opens Sunday at the Bristol Theatre, turns the crooner away from the fast-stepping and energetic role he played recently in "Doctor Rhythm" and plants him in a role reminiscent of the one he had in "Waikiki Wedding." Bing portrays the happy-go-lucky and ne'er-do-well son of a small town family who wins fame for himself and his mad-cap family by persistent nerve, and his incomparable good fortune.

GRAND

Bringing the world-famous team of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers together once more, RKO Radio's "Carefree" presents a glittering, joyous and song-studded film romance embellished with Irving Berlin melodies, starting dance routines and a deftly-handled story, at the Grand Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Because Ginger keeps breaking off her wedding date with Ralph Bellamy, the latter asks Astaire, a psychiatrist, to fix up any lurking inhibitions the lady may have on the subject of marriage. The pretty patient complicates matters by falling in love with Fred instead of with Ralph.

When the psychiatrist fails to respond, the actress starts a hectic series of madcap adventure, the doctor meantime falling in love with her himself, only to find that he has a new resistance to overcome. How the seemingly lost cause is won at the last moment makes for the uproarious climax of the picture, which is said to be both the funniest and most entertaining of all the Astaire-Rogers vehicles.

The two stars, with cleverly drawn roles to enact as the psychiatrist and the actress, have unusual opportunities to display the talents that made them the world's premiere dancing duo, and Ralph Bellamy as the lawyer forms the third corner of the tumultuous triangle in what is perhaps his finest role to date.

Sponsored by the Bucks County Dogwood Association, of which Robert B. McKenney, of near Newtown, is the president, a tour of interest will take place on Saturday, October 29th.

The purpose of the tour will be to visit Revolutionary War sites in the Delaware Valley section of the Valley Forge-Delaware Valley Dogwood Trail.

Members of the pilgrimage will assemble at the General Greene Inn at 10:30 o'clock, and from that point will proceed to the Buckingham Friends' Meeting House.

Other places to be visited will be Aqueetong, at one time known as Paxson's Corner, New Hope, Bowman's Hill and Washington Crossing.

Members of the party will provide box lunch, and this will be served at the Thompson House at Bowman's Hill between 12 and one o'clock.

DI MIDIO ONLY MEMBER ON SQUAD ON SELECTED LIST

Named "All County" Back
When He Was In His Sophomore Year

WAS HARD PLAYER

Bore Brunt of Running Attack and Handled Punting and Passing Duties

Danny DiMidio, big fullback for the Cardinal and Gray outfit, is the only member of the present squad who ever had the honor of being selected on the "All Lower Bucks" conference football team. Danny received that distinction when only a sophomore, just last year. And the selection was well accorded him at that time for he was practically the entire Cardinal backfield in 1937. Under the system then employed by Coach Juenger, it was Danny's job to lug the ball on nearly every play or every other play as fullback. At least he handled the ball in one way or another on almost every play last year.

For not only did Danny bear the brunt of the running attack, but he also handled much of the punting and passing duties, and when not lugging the leather himself, he was leading the way for other ball toters. It was the ability with which Danny handled himself in all these departments that eventually won him a place on the "All County" eleven last year.

But the thing that makes Danny so well liked among his own team-mates is the fact that when he is honored with such a distinction, he still wears the same size hat (if he wears any) and he doesn't put himself aloof from the rest of the boys on the team—he is still just "one of them."

This year is the third season Danny has starred for the local grid army, having won a job on the varsity eleven when only a Freshman. But beside football, Danny also performs excellently on the basketball courts, and is a good trackman, having won his merits in both of these sports, also.

SOUTHAMPTON OUT OF SCHOOL SOCCER RACE

NEW HOPE, Oct. 29.—New Hope High's soccer team won its first game of the present season at the expense of coach Claude Lodge's Southampton Greynolds here Thursday afternoon, 1-0.

As a result of the setback, the Greynolds were definitely eliminated from all possibilities of capturing the 1938 soccer diadem of Lower Bucks County as they dropped their third contest of the current campaign. They have only one more game on the schedule and if they win that while Buckingham loses their final two, the Greynolds would have only six points to eight for Buckingham, which would still leave them two points behind the Bucks.

"RECS" BOOKED TO PLAY HERE TOMORROW

Tomorrow the Recs will play the Philadelphia Collegians of Philadelphia on Leedom's ground at 2:30 p. m. The club is one of the best in the semi-pro ranks and the local management has gone to considerable expense in getting this club to come to Bristol.

Coach George Dougherty has worked hard this week trying out different combinations to see if he can put the Recs back on the winning path and he has shifted Dutch McLaughlin to the backfield to see if he can plug up the gap left vacant by his injury.

ST. ANN'S ELEVEN TO PLAY AT DOYLESTOWN

St. Ann's A. A. will play one of its crucial games of the season, tomorrow afternoon, when it clashes with the Doylestown Moose, on Community Field, Doylestown, at 2:30 o'clock.

The "Saints" held two practice sessions this week and are working hard to get into the win column. Willow Grove and Disston Scholastics have scored triumphs over the "Saints."

Coach Dougherty's boys have been the jinx to the Moose, having beaten them three seasons straight, last year triumphing 12-0.

A large crowd is expected to follow the locals to the Moose affair to see the Purple and Gold begin its fight for Bucks County recognition. The team has been strengthened by the return of Teddie Tosti and Sammy Ross to the backfield.

Next Sunday, November 6th, the Wood street aggregation will meet Andalusia in its annual fracas.

GIRL GAME HUNTER

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — Despite the fact she never before had handled a rifle or revolver, Edith Bray, 20-year-old Philadelphia girl, recently shot three jacksnaps on a four-months hunting trip in Brazil.

Miss Bray was one of two young women who accompanied Sasha Slemel, noted game hunter, on his trip into the Mato Grosso, savage South American jungle. The young adventures practiced shooting a rifle on shipboard enroute to the hunting country.

ANDALUSIA BOOKED TO PLAY TODAY AND SUNDAY

Joe Diamanti's Andalusia A. A. eleven is sporting the best record of the gridiron teams in this vicinity according to the ratings of the teams. Diamanti's boys have won five straight and are scheduled to play twice over the week-end. They have amassed a total of 103 points and have not been scored upon.

South Langhorne follows Andalusia with three wins and one tie. Yardley has two victories and a deadlock. The Bristol Recs have won one game and have a tie in five tries while Coach "Bill" Dougherty's St. Ann's team is without a victory in two games.

Coach Joe Diamanti's Andalusia A. A. gridsters faces their stiffest opposition of the season over the week-end when they face the Bordentown Manual Training School today and the Arlington Bears, tomorrow. The game with the Manual Training School will be played at Bordentown.

However, despite the opposition, the Andalusians feel confident of winning both contests to bring their record to seven straight triumphs. The Andalusia boys are clicking at a fast rate and deserve plenty of recognition in this section, having won five games and are unscored upon and have garnered a total of 103 points.

The Green Wave is preparing for the invasion of the St. Ann's team next Sunday and are determined to hand the Bristolians a defeat. Last year, St. Ann's won 6-0.

The Manual Training team is also unbeaten, having been victorious over the Princess Ann Teachers' College of Washington, the Bowie (Maryland) Teachers College and the Dover (Delaware) Teachers College. The record of the team is as follows:

7—Princess Ann	6
12—Bowie T. C.	6
19—Dover T. C.	12
28—Opposition	18

Both coaches will use their strongest lineups at the start of the fracas with Diamanti starting: Roberts and Jungmanns, ends; Robertson and Trimmer, tackles; Cunningham and Laster, guards; Chapman, center; R. Lange, quarterback; McMahon and Girard, halfbacks; Carter, fullback. The Bordentown lineup will be as follows: Pletcher and Spicer, ends; Robertson and Drake, tackles; Allison and Bohanus, guards; Williams, center; Harris, quarterback; Powell and Weston, halfbacks; and Johnson, fullback.

The game will be refereed by Mike Derrick, West Chester. Mike Derisi, West Chester, will umpire, and W. Lange, Central, will be head linesman. The game will be part of the celebration of Home Coming Day for the Alumnae of the Bordentown Manual Training School for Colored Boys.

FOOTBALL HERE TODAY
Coach Steve Juenger announced yesterday that the Bristol-Langhorne game would go on schedule today, providing the field was in fit condition to play.

SPEEDY VERDICT

MARYVILLE, O.—(INS)—A common pleas court jury wasted little time in convicting Paul Winegardner, 37, of burglary. The guilty verdict was returned in 10 minutes and Winegardner was immediately transferred to Ohio penitentiary to start a one-to-five year term.

TWO GRID GAMES ARE POSTPONED, DUE TO RAIN

Both of yesterday's scheduled grid battles, one at Cornwells Heights and one at Newtown, were postponed because of the rain.

Down at Bensalem, coach George Reimer's Owls were carded to pair off against the invading Pemberton Cornhuskers from New Jersey, while Allan Tomlinson's Newtown Indians were supposed to have met the Fallsington Falcons at Newtown. Both teams waited until almost the deadline before postponing the games, but when that time arrived and rain continued the only alternative for each to take was to postpone the tilts.

The Bensalem-Pemberton contest will go on schedule on the Owls field Monday afternoon, the Newtown-Fallsington game has been set back to a later date. This being a conference fray, it could not be cancelled from the schedule. And since both clubs had an open date for Friday, November 11, the game has been booked for that day.

Pleads For Americans To Uphold Democracy

Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs in the Friends' Meeting House, here, was "Democracy in a Changing World," and in no uncertain tones did she drive home the need for watchfulness on the part of every American to safeguard and uphold Democracy.

Introduced by Mrs. William C. Otter, state vice-president of the Southeastern District of Pennsylvania, who in turn had been presented to the gathering by the Bucks County president, Mrs. Calvin S. Boyer, Doylestown, Mrs. Whitehurst thoroughly aroused the club women when she told of what testimony the Dies Investigation has brought forth, with many young people after great spread of propaganda, taking the silent oath of allegiance to the flag bearing the Swastika.

"It is unfortunate that with our potential power we are so apathetic in the light of what is going on. We should not let this subtle propaganda seep into our gatherings and into our minds. We must be ever watchful. I believe Democracy is the only form of government for a free people."

So many who feel that dictatorship is a good thing, don't know the other side of dictatorship. They do not realize that those who live under a dictatorship do not have free speech, that they are not permitted to do the type of work they please; that concentration and penal camps are the answer to some who would defy the dictators; and that food is rationed out in many instances. The standard of living here in America is far above that of any nation on the face of the globe. We have the right form of government. It is true there are weaknesses in it, but let us obviate them. Let us study our problems so intensely that when propaganda comes we will not succumb."

This woman orator, who has travelled back and forth across the continent many times, is likewise secretary of the Board of Regents of the University of Maryland, and general chairman of the Golden Jubilee Celebration of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be marked in 1941.

Mrs. Whitehurst informed at the outset of her address that Democracy is going through a challenging period. "I want to tell you that Democracy rests on the intelligence and worth of the average man and woman. It also rests on equal suffrage for all classes and both sexes."

The 235 club members, who filled the old Friends' Meeting House on this inclement day, were informed that "Democracy did not have its beginning as many think, in this country. It started in Greece, and was known long before the time of Christ."

And we find that never in the history of our country have our people been so skeptical of Democracy as right now. The reasons advanced for this trend of thought by the Maryland woman are: the recent World War, the economic depression, change of psychology of the people themselves (with lack of faith in government, in religion and in themselves), complexity of government, weaknesses in the government set-up, and propaganda by those who would seek to substitute another form of government.

Referring to those who "ignorantly say they wouldn't mind a dictatorship," Mrs. Whitehurst asked: "What is wrong? I think it is all due to lack of education along our lines of government. We must go out and sell Democracy. And we have got to start at home, and show our young people the benefits derived from Democracy, and show them that Democracy is the best way. And women, I tell you, the women of America can get anything they want if they want it bad enough. Let us fight in an educational way for Democracy."

That dictatorships are nothing new was one point brought out. "In the year 82 B. C., a dictatorship was considered, and in 42 B. C., one man set himself up as a dictator. . . . And here we have an American people with the finest form of representative government known to the world in any period, and some are willing to give it up. Why, we have better houses, better working conditions, and better living standards than any country in the world. We have things that need to be righted, it is true, but no country on the face of the globe is as well off as America is. Let us hold Democracy high!"

Needs of the day listed by the Baltimore woman included: Adult education of what Democracy has to give; elimination of weaknesses in Democracy, with unemployment problems being pointed out; better housing in parts where needed; better health standards with medical aid to those in need.

"Democracy is doomed unless we have a contented citizenry. I have never yet seen a representative of capital and one of labor on the same program as speakers. Something should be done along this line, so that the needs might be met. . . . And this we must guard against—if there is one thing that will lead to dictatorship it is regimentation of labor."

In bringing up the question of the "spoils" system, Mrs. Whitehurst informed the women that is one thing they can correct. "You can't blame the politicians for that condition. It is only natural that one running for public office should aid those who help him to succeed. But if you women would start to work in earnest for advancement of the merit system, we can get it. But we must keep everlastingly at it."

The day's program was divided into two sessions, with box lunches at the noon hour being supplemented by serving of coffee and ice cream by the hostess club, Langhorne Sorosis.

The morning meeting included: Singing of the county song, led by Miss Lillian VanArtsdalen, Yardley, county chairman of music; salute to the flag, led by Mrs. Samuel Althouse, Sellersville; invocation, Mrs. Joseph O. Canby, of the hostess club; singing of the Collect, Sorosis members; welcome extended by Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr., president of Sorosis, with response by the county president, Mrs. Boyer.

Reports included: Minutes, Mrs. Walter Wiley, Mechanicsville; corresponding secretary's report, Mrs. J. Lawrence Grim, Morrisville; treasurer, Mrs. J. Melvin Freed, Perkasie; scholarship, Mrs. Daniel Erdman, Quakertown; safety, Mrs. Alvin Pratt, Morrisville; juniors, Mrs. Horace Watson, Newtown.

Three addresses were included before the luncheon period. Miss Virginia Elliman, representing the Southeastern District of the Pennsylvania Red Cross, spoke on "The Present Status of Public Health Nursing in Bucks County," and Mrs. Martha Wooley, Lahaska, told of "County Planning and Zoning."

"Art Appreciation" was the subject assigned to Joseph T. Fraser, Jr., secretary of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia. He asked that the public be patient with the artist, as the artist today is probably just as confused as are our present-day bankers and business men. "Art is progressing at such a great rate today. But the artists are earnest and interested in trying to say the story of things we are experiencing today."

That art appreciation comes through knowledge, and that knowledge of art does not come in a casual way, was one point brought out. The fine line drawn between fine arts, and applied and industrial arts, was mentioned. Advised to purchase paintings that really appeal to them, the women were informed that "Appreciation of art grows by leaps and bounds if you own a fine art piece. And you will gain knowledge and appreciation through constant association." The women were advised to "Be brave in art purchases. Buy what you like. And furthermore, get away from the idea that just because it is an oil painting that you happen to have in the family that it can never be put away." Another piece of advice was "Go to the exhibits and museums frequently, and enjoy those art objects you can." Numerous questions were answered by Mr. Fraser.

The registrar's report showed that 225 seniors and nine juniors were present at the session, in addition to a few guests. Clubs represented were from Bristol, Buckingham, Chalfont, Doylestown Nature Club and Doylestown Village Improvement Association, Langhorne, Makefield, Morrisville, New Hope, Newtown, Perkasie, Quakertown, Southampton, Warrington, and Yardley.

Mrs. William C. Otter, state vice-president from the Southeastern District, addressed the gathering during the afternoon, telling of the outstanding plans of the state federation for the year, telling of the club women of the state working for requirement of pre-marital examinations for all, highway beautification, elimination of marihuana, etc. She called attention to the state convention at Buck Hill Falls from May 23 to 25.

Readings by Miss Mary Meyers, Torresdale, were varied in their appeal, and highly pleased the audience.

Mrs. Irvin M. James, Doylestown, of the courtesies committee, expressed appreciation for Langhorne club's hospitality.

During the noon hour those attending had the opportunity to view the arts and crafts exhibit arranged by Mrs. John Noble. Many club women placed in the exhibit oil paintings, pen sketches, sculpture, hooked rugs, needlepoint, crocheted and knitted items, lamp shades, etc.

The committee arranging the program of the Fall meeting was composed of: Mrs. Earl Tomb, Mrs. Emil Metzger, Bristol; Mrs. Gladys T. Hagar, and Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr.

books, the members can derive much inspiration by attending the meetings.

Representatives of the following libraries responded to roll call: Bristol, Melinda Cox Free Library, Doylestown High School Library, Mary H. Walter Memorial Library, Fallsington, Langhorne, National Farm School, New Britain, Free Library of New Hope and Solebury, Newtown, Southampton, Wycombe, Yardley, Ambler, Harboro, Glenside and North Wales.

Representatives of all libraries reported that they intend to observe Book Week. They also reported an increase in reading, and representatives of several libraries announced an increase in the reading of non-fiction books. The representative of the Ambler Library said special effort is being made to have the young boys patronize the library in the evenings. Announcement was made of the Fall meeting of the Pennsylvania Library Association which will be held at Buck Hill Falls on October 27, 28 and 29. Prior to adjournment for the noon hour Miss Matthews gave a short talk.

Flowers in both the library and "Bird-In-Hand," where the afternoon session was held, were furnished by the Newtown Garden Club.

The afternoon session was opened with a brief musical program, during which Rufus Blanchard, a George School student, rendered violin solos and Miss Dorothy Hentz, also a George School student, delighted her audience with the rendition of several vocal solos. Both were accompanied by Julian McCreary, George School.

The first speaker at the afternoon session was Dr. John C. Mendenhall.

instructor of English at the University of Pennsylvania, who spoke of the development of the libraries. He spoke of the Greeks as the first to develop libraries. He also commented briefly upon the great value of books during the Dark Ages. At that time some of them were chained to desks so that they would not be stolen. Text books could be rented to scholars. When Benjamin Franklin went to study in London in 1725 he rented his books. Rooming houses in some places were equipped with libraries for the benefit of the patrons.

Continuing, Dr. Mendenhall stated that when Franklin returned to Philadelphia he established 10 debating societies and out of them were developed the libraries in that day.

Edward R. Barnsley, of this place, read a very interesting paper on the history of the Newtown Library. As president of the board of directors of the Newtown Library Company, Mr. Barnsley said the library at this place was organized in 1760 with about 35 volumes on hand. Incorporated March 27, 1789, this library today has 13,000 volumes.
